Privacy Statement

The journal is committed to protecting the privacy and confidentiality of all authors, reviewers, editors, and visitors who interact with our website or participate in our publication process. We handle all personal information responsibly, securely, and in accordance with international publishing and data protection standards.

Collection of Information

We collect only the personal data necessary for processing manuscript submissions, managing peer review, communicating editorial decisions, and improving our website services. This may include names, affiliations, emails, ORCID IDs, reviewer comments, and manuscript files.

Use of Information

All information collected is used solely for editorial, administrative, and communication purposes related to the journal. We do not sell, share, or use personal data for commercial purposes.

Confidentiality

Submitted manuscripts, reviewer comments, and editorial correspondence are treated with strict confidentiality. Reviewer identities remain anonymous unless agreed upon by the reviewer.

Data Protection

We use secure digital systems to store and protect personal and manuscript-related data from unauthorized access, loss, or misuse. Access is limited to authorized editorial staff.

Cookies and Website Data

Our website may use cookies or analytics tools to enhance user experience. No personally identifiable information is collected without your consent.

Third-Party Services

We may use trusted third-party tools (e.g., plagiarism detection software) that follow strict privacy and security practices. No personal data is shared with unauthorized entities.

User Rights

Authors, reviewers, and users may request access to, correction of their personal data by contacting the editorial office.

Updates to This Statement

This Privacy Statement may be updated as required to reflect changes in policies or legal requirements. Any updates will be posted on the journal's website.
